Dear Hiring Manager,

I am writing to apply for the [Role] position at [Company]. I am an early-career professional at GrowthSchool / Outskill, an EdTech company, where I have spent my first three months doing work well beyond my job title, and I would like to bring that same range and ownership to your team.

My core role is in sales, and I have delivered there: in my first full month on target I closed Rs. 9.7 lakh against a Rs. 7.5 lakh goal, which put me in the top 7 of a roughly 30-person team. But the work I am proudest of is what I built around the job. I noticed that every new hire was trained by senior staff running mock calls by hand, so I designed and built an AI training platform on my own, using Claude over about three weeks. New joiners now practise live voice mock calls against AI buyers, get their pitch scored automatically, and receive coaching after each attempt, while managers see a dashboard of every trainee's progress. It has been formally recognised and is now in use at our new regional office.

I also work closely with data. I converted our team's manual sales tracking into an automated dashboard that senior leadership now relies on, and I maintain a daily revenue and funnel report used to understand performance across teams. Alongside that, I authored the onboarding decks used for our new office launch and supported HR through the hiring process. Before this role, I built Power BI dashboards during a documentation internship, led 15+ events as Director of my university's Entrepreneurship Cell, and co-founded a revenue-generating student platform. Different settings, but the same instinct in each: find the gap, design the fix, and ship it.

[Why this company and role: add one or two lines here on what draws you to [Company] specifically, and connect one or two of your strengths above to what the role needs.]

I would welcome the chance to discuss how I can contribute. Thank you for your time and consideration, and I have included a link to some of the work I have built below.

Warm regards,

Garvit Saraf
